ABSTRACT

A technique for sharing register resources within a microprocessor. More particularly, embodiments of the invention pertain to a register sharing technique within a microprocessor for multiple-threads of instructions that facilitates an optimal number of physical registers to be mapped to a desired number of logical registers without incurring significant hardware overhead.